C GUINEA-UN: Guinean President Toure claimed Wednesday that the UN Security Council's decision on Tuesday to investigate the alleged existence of a Portuguese-backed invasion threat has "deterring the aggression." He has asked the Council not to send a fact-finding mission to Conakry, and the Council probably will comply with his request. The original charge, as well as Toure's subsequent contention, is linked more to domestic political considerations than to the imminence of any external threat.
